LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

IN CHAMBERS.

STATION HANDS AND PASTORALISTS.
(Before Mr. Justice Higgins.)
His Honor commenced the hearing of the motion filed by the A.W.U. that a dispute arising between members of its organization and the Pastoralists' Federal Council of Australia and others. It was admitted, on behalf of the respondents, that disputes existed in relation to the station hands and shepherds, but respondents denied any dispute in the matter of station hands. The day was occupied by the calling of the roll and the hearing of the motion, who put in authorities signed by employees who were members of the union and working on the various stations of the Commonwealth, with the exception of Tasmania and Western Australia. Each authority bore the signature of all the employees of the station who were members of the union. It was stated by counsel that 1007 authorities would have to be sworn to. The motion stands part heard.

RANCO COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice.)

A TAXATION MATTER.

Jardine v. Federal Commissioner of Taxation.
Mr. Jardine, K.C., and Mr. Harper, instructed by Messrs. Jardine, Simpson, and Co., appeared for the plaintiff, the appellant, against an income tax assessment made by the Federal Commissioner of Taxation, and Mr. Levermore, K.C., and Mr. Coffey, instructed by the Commonwealth Crown Solicitor, for the respondent. By consent, the case was referred to the High Court on a special case prepared by the parties and approved by his Honor.

CLAIM FOR SERVICES.

Kather and another v. Buchanan.

Mr. Kather, instructed by Messrs. Pelton and Love, appeared for the plaintiffs. Defendant did not appear. This was an action brought by Kather and another against Buchanan, Kather and another, to recover the sum of £124 3s 6d for services rendered and materials and goods supplied.

STRUGGLE FOR LENS.

STUBBORN REARGUARD FIGHTING.

AUSTRALIAN VICTORY

LONDON, April 16.

Reports indicate that while British patrols in places have penetrated into Lens, the town is not yet in our occupation. German rearguards are stubbornly resisting the oncoming British, while the German main force, working under great pressure, are removing guns and stores.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his midday report on Sunday, stated: As a result of fighting north-west of St. Quentin we gained ground east and north of Gricourt.

We also made progress in the neighbourhood of Valenciennes. Our troops, which were approaching the outskirts of Lens, have been repulsed. Our aeroplanes carried out successful bombing raids. There has been severe fighting. We destroyed four German aeroplanes and drove down 11 others. Two of ours are missing.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his midday report on Sunday stated: We advanced our line eastward of Heuglincourt (south-east of Arras). We made progress northward of the Souchez River west of Lens.

We captured defences eastward of Lillers, south-westward of and adjoining Lens, from Hamont Wood to the east corner of Cite St. Pierre (north-westward of Lens).

Our troops are progressing towards Lens.

Heavy rain has been falling since early morning.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communiqué issued at midday on Sunday stated: violent fighting has been going on near St. Quentin and north of the Aisne in the Champagne area. Our batteries caught and dispersed enemy elements north of Stancourt.

A French communiqué issued on Sunday afternoon stated: North and south of the line we made night reconnaissance. Everywhere we found the enemy trenches and dugouts. We captured 200 prisoners. We brought back a quantity of material.

On the right bank of the Meuse two German attacks on Bois-de-Carrières and in the direction of Les Châtenettes were repulsed. Our aeroplanes carried out successful bombing raids. We brought back a quantity of material.

On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday we brought down 21 aeroplanes. Four were captured and landed. Our aeroplanes carried out successful bombing raids. We brought back a quantity of material.

On Friday night and Saturday morning we effectively bombed the enemy. We brought back a quantity of material.

A Belgian communiqué stated: During Sunday night, after violent artillery preparation, we penetrated at Dixmude into the second enemy line. There was a very heavy artillery duel on the whole of the Belgian front to-day.

GERMAN REPORTS.

A German official message on Sunday afternoon stated: In consequence of the removal of our line north of the Scarpe only minor engagements have been fought, in which the enemy suffered heavily. From the Scarpe towards the Arras-Cambrai railway there was violent fighting yesterday.

The British massed divisions attacked several times, but were singularly repulsed. We captured 200 prisoners. The artillery duel continues in the Western Champagne, and between Soissons and Reims. The French, British, and Americans lost 21 aeroplanes, and two balloons. We brought down three British aeroplanes participating in an attack on Valenciennes.

WHAT GERMANY LOSES.

The New York newspapers comment on the tremendous effects of the British advance in France, resulting in the loss of German prestige and the surrender of indispensable resources.

AUSTRALIAN FRONT.

STRONG ENEMY ATTACK BROKEN.

According to Sir Douglas Haig's latest communiqué, the Germans have made a very powerful, but vain, counter-attack on the section of the front west of Cambrai, which is held by the Australians. Sir Douglas Haig, in his noon report on Sunday, says:—

Early this morning the enemy strongly attacked over a six-mile front astride the Bapaume-Cambrai road, under cover of a heavy bombardment, our new positions, from Hermies to Nouvion. The attack failed everywhere, except at Lagnicourt, where the enemy gained a foothold. After heavy fighting our counter-attack regained the village, our artillery inflicting two heaviest losses on the retreating troops. We made over 200 prisoners.

Reporting at midday on Sunday, Sir Douglas Haig says: Later particulars show that the German losses during their attack astride the Bapaume-Cambrai road, under cover of a heavy bombardment, our new positions, from Hermies to Nouvion. The attack failed everywhere, except at Lagnicourt, where the enemy gained a foothold. After heavy fighting our counter-attack regained the village, our artillery inflicting two heaviest losses on the retreating troops. We made over 200 prisoners.

Mr. Philip Gibbs says that the German reconquest of Lagnicourt (south-east of Croisilles) was very brief. The Australians recaptured the village with the utmost dash.

HINDENBURG LINE BROKEN.

AUSTRALIANS' TEMPORARY SUCCESS.

Cabling from London on April 16, Mr. Beth, official correspondent with the Australian forces, says:—

I have to record an attack by Australian troops which will live in history as long as history exists. In order to take the fullest advantage of the great success near Arras it was necessary that the Hindenburg line should be attacked at a point where the Australians faced it. This line is defended by wire entanglements, of whose strength the whole world has heard. It is recognised as being something unparalleled in the history of fortifications. The chance of a very great success made the enterprise most important, though it was realised that such success might be impossible to attain.

At dawn on the morning of April 11 the Australians attacked. That irresistible Australian infantry fought its way under machine gun fire through such wire as was hitherto unknown, seized two lines of Hindenburg trenches, and pushed forward as ordered and took the village of Reims.

By this time one of the tanks had got through the wire. The infantry followed it further, and in accordance with the plan, entered the village of Hindencourt, 2000 yards beyond the Hindenburg line, within two hours of starting. This feat is almost unbelievable by those who know those who have seen the strength of the fortifications. It was, however, attained. German infantry and transport were seen streaming towards the rear.

Here, however, this wonderfully brave effort spent itself. With their ranks thinned by heavy fighting, this handful of men, alone in the enemy's country, was unable to keep their machine-gun fire, and, coming from all sides. The further parties were completely cut off by a sickle.

Towards midday the Germans, heavily reinforced, counter-attacked along the whole line, and after heavy bomb fighting, which I saw with my own eyes, lasting nearly an hour, the remaining troops were driven out from the Hindenburg line. From certain definite reports of movements, there is every reason to believe that, though the Australians did not succeed in this extraordinary gallant attack, it had a marked effect on the progress of the troops elsewhere. In any case, it was one of the most gallant feats the Australian soldiers ever performed, and won high praise from the army commander.

BATTLE FOR LENS.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, telegraphing on Sunday morning, says: Great and far-reaching results followed swiftly upon the capture of Viay Ridge by the Canadians. Our troops cleared out the German machine-guns from the rear point in Viay (west of Lens) on Saturday, enabling our patrols to penetrate Lens. The retaking of Lens will thrill France. It will be one of the greatest achievements in the war.

With cunning and courage some of our men entered the southern outskirts of the city; others advanced cautiously on the western side. The enemy was still there in the machine-gun redoubts, and would be troublesome, but they were only the rear guard. The main body had already retreated. After the British-Canadian success on Friday the enemy saw that his last chance for a successful counter-attack had been failed. He was immediately seized with fear and prepared for instant retreat in wild confusion.

Levin was stacked with guns and fortified in the most formidable way, but all these preparations were threatened by our advance down the northern slopes of Viay, for the Canadians were not likely to stay inactive after their great triumph. The German staff was also threatened by the British advance from Lens. There were wild scenes in Lens during the efforts of the enemy to remove his guns, stores, and troops.

At dawn on Friday the enemy hoped to be held back by the German rearguards in Viay and Petit-Viay villages. This hope disappeared when the Canadians swept down the ridge and chased the enemy out of those places over the lower slopes towards Douai.

Fires and explosions were one of the first signs of the German retreat. Then they began to shell their own zone lines outside Levin and Lens. All night a sky was aflame. In the morning I saw the enemy making a merry little hell in the Lens suburbs and its dependent villages. The explosions continued throughout the morning and afternoon. Meanwhile our men were advancing from Levin, and throughout were having a hard time, costly task to root out machine-gun emplacements, especially two terribly strong redoubts called Crook and Crazy. Each group of streets had separate defences—barbed wire and sand-bag barriers, with a nest of machine-guns. A quick advance through Lens would have been a great and needless sacrifice of life.

I was an eye-witness of the attack on the southern suburbs of Lens. The troops swarmed across the open ground in scattered groups, and took cover along an embankment, where other attackers joined them. After waiting half an hour they doubled half left, led by an officer, well ahead, and crossed a sunken road.

They ascended the slope they suddenly reversed their direction, and again began rushing the crest, disappearing in a long straight street. The correctness of the manoeuvre was immediately proved. German shells plastered the embankment where they had previously assembled. Other troops crept up, steering an erratic course in short rushes until they reached the same street. Lens was being breached. My latest report stated that the British, shelling heavily about a church, and the enemy's troops and transports were retreating hastily.

Mr. Gibbs, in a later message, says: The attack on the northern suburbs was successful. The British, avoiding a direct assault on the hill, crept round to the left and gained the high ground north-west from whence they captured Bois-Haumont. The enemy, recovering from the first panic, sent back troops to the trenches and machine-gun redoubts in the western suburbs, finding they had not sufficient time to prepare forward positions between Dourocourt and Queant.

Meanwhile 2000 women, children, and old men, who were unable to escape in the interval, were seeking refuge in the cellars, and enduring the agonies of the bombardment.

The Germans quit Levin in such haste that they captured vast quantities of bombs, trench mortars, and shells. The German counter-attack at Lagnicourt is clear evidence of the enemy's anxiety for this portion of the line. The village faces the important bastion of Queant.

THE COAL MINES OF LENS.

Before the war Lens was a prosperous coal-mining town of about 20,000 people. It was the centre of the extensive and valuable coal basin of the department of Pas-de-Calais, and in the Lens and surrounding mines, which produced 8,000,000 tons of coal per annum, was the largest coal-mining area in France. It is in this connection that the capture of Lens is likely to prove most useful. Almost all the coal supplies that so greatly embarrassed the German army were obtained in North France. In the territory now occupied by the Germans, and it was the cutting off of these supplies that gave every assistance in harvesting and transporting. Supplies must be maintained, no matter how many ships are sent to the bottom. America must correct this unpardonable waste and extravagance.

The President further urges personal and national economy, and the conversion of the industrial forces to the great national need and the service of the army. Foodstuffs are the Allies' supreme need. The world's reserves are low. Unless there is abundant food for the Allies' peoples the whole great enterprise upon which they had embarked would break down and fail.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a letter to the Senate's Military Committee, urges the raising of from 100,000 to 500,000 volunteers for service in Europe, as early as possible. He believes that he could raise a division in two or three months. "This," he says, "could pay for itself in a dollar war. Let us put our bodies for our souls' desires."

There are great preparations in Washington for the reception of the British mission, led by Mr. Balfour, the foreign minister. It is expected that the bill authorising the loan of $10,000,000, which is already through the House of Representatives, will have a rapid passage through the Senate.

SPAIN AND GERMANY

A message from Madrid says the Government denies that any modification has been made by Spain in her international policy. The Government declares that the note sent to Germany is as energetic as the circumstances demand.

It is stated that Germany will facilitate Spanish imports from America, provided that the House of Representatives in the United States will import remains in Spain.

DAMAGE TO LINER.

LONDON, April 16.

The trans-Atlantic liner York, which struck a mine outside of Liverpool, has been docked. There is a hole 16ft by 20ft on her starboard side. Her machinery is not injured. The repairs are not expected to take long.

GERMANY BUYING ARGENTINE WHEAT.

A message from Buenos Ayres says that the German Government has purchased from the Argentine 50,000 tons of wheat and 20,000 tons of oats. The purchases are on consignment.

WAR FEVER IN THE ARGENTINE.

A message from Buenos Ayres says that the war fever in the Argentine is growing. A mob attempted to get to the German Consulate, but the outbreak was soon quelled.

COST OF THE WAR.

A Vienna expert estimates the cost of the war to the end of March, at £17,000,000,000, of which Britain has borne one quarter.

BODY OF DEAD PRINCE.

Negotiations have been opened up between London and Berlin to secure permission for the body of the Hohenzollern Prince, Frederick Karl (who was wounded and captured by the Australians when driving over the British German front), to be sent to his home.

COOLEBAR AGROUND.

Whilst attempting to navigate the entrance of the Bellinger River on Saturday, the North Coast Company's steamer Coolebar, proceeding south through some mishap, ran on to the south beach, where she was stuck for some time. The ship's crew, and the passengers, were rescued, and the ship was refloated. The pilot had no doubt that the ship was stuck on the beach, and that a fair amount of water was making into the hold. As the ship was stuck, the pilot decided to abandon the ship and to pull the crew and passengers to safety. The ship was refloated, and the pilot decided to abandon the ship and to pull the crew and passengers to safety.

ORGANISING U.S.A. RESOURCES.

GREAT ARMY FOR ALLIES

NEW YORK, April 15.

The following message to the United States people has been issued by President Wilson:—

Our entrance into this grim and horrible war for democracy and for human rights creates the gravest problems in our national life. We are rapidly putting the navy on an effective war footing, and we are about to create and equip a great army. We must supply foodstuffs, not only to ourselves, but to the Allies, beside whom we will be fighting. We must supply ships by hundreds, coal, steel rails, locomotives, horses—everything which the Allies now cannot afford, men, materials, and machinery to make.

There shall be no unwarranted manipulation of the resources of the United States.

Supplies must be maintained, no matter how many ships are sent to the bottom. America must correct this unpardonable waste and extravagance.

THE COAL MINES OF LENS.

Before the war Lens was a prosperous coal-mining town of about 20,000 people. It was the centre of the extensive and valuable coal basin of the department of Pas-de-Calais, and in the Lens and surrounding mines, which produced 8,000,000 tons of coal per annum, was the largest coal-mining area in France. It is in this connection that the capture of Lens is likely to prove most useful. Almost all the coal supplies that so greatly embarrassed the German army were obtained in North France. In the territory now occupied by the Germans, and it was the cutting off of these supplies that gave every assistance in harvesting and transporting. Supplies must be maintained, no matter how many ships are sent to the bottom. America must correct this unpardonable waste and extravagance.
